A senior minister in the Yogi Adityanath government, however, said there was no proposal to withdraw the cases under serious charges of crime pending against the ministers and MLAs. The minister said information was being collected from districts and the process of withdrawal of cases was underway. The minister said,

"Rakesh Sachan is the first minister to be convicted in a criminal case under the Arms Act. He was granted bail by the court and also allowed to file an appeal in the High Court." He said the Bharatiya Janata Party leadership, after considering all the aspects, had decided to retain Rakesh Sachan in the cabinet.

The minister added, "All the cases registered against the ministers and MLAs during the previous regime due to political vendetta would soon be withdrawn." According to UP election watchdog, Association of Democratic Reforms (ADR), analysis of affidavits submitted by 45 politicians who were sworn in as ministers in Uttar Pradesh showed that nearly half had declared criminal cases against themselves and most of them face serious charges.

According to the ADR report, 22 (49 per cent) ministers have declared criminal cases against themselves and 20 (44 per cent) ministers have declared serious criminal cases against themselves.

The ADR defines serious criminal cases as offences for which maximum punishment is five years or more, are nonbailable or an electoral offence. Offences like assault, murder, kidnap, rape, those under the Prevention of Corruption Act and crimes against women are also defined as "serious criminal

"I feel this is appositive change for the whole of the nation because the era of the backdoor politics have been countered very well by Kumar is what I personally believe....This backdoor politics should be one way or the other stopped and Bihar has started the way," she said.

NCP Chief Sharad Pawar accused the BJP of finishing off its regional allies gradually, and supported Kumar's decision to snap ties with the BJP. Speaking to reporters in Baramati town of Maharashtra's Pune district, Pawar claimed the BJP was planning how to weaken the Shiv Sena and create a division in the party.

'Today, the BJP is planning how the Shiv Sena can be weakened by creating a division in the party, and (present Maharashtra CM) Eknath Shinde and others helped," he said.

A similar picture was being seen in Bihar. Kumar, of the JD(U), and the BJP contested the last Assembly elections together, he said.

"One more speciality of the BJP is that it joins hands with a regional party at the time of elections, but ensures the ally wins fewer seats. It happened in Maharashtra also," Pawar claimed. When a similar picture was being witnessed in Bihar, the CM of the State got cautious well in advance and took the decision to snap ties with the BJP, he said. "No matter how much BJP leaders criticise Kumar, but he has taken a wise step. He took the decision anticipating the crisis the BJP was planning to bring on. I think he made a wise decision for his state and party," Pawar said.
